Are the results and findings of the questionnaire sent to the Member States now known. Psychology Professor Jerry Burger from Santa Clara University found that one third of American adults over the age of 30 had revisited their childhood homes houses they lived in from ages 5 to Through his research, Burger concluded that the journey was made usually for one of three reasons: a desire to reconnect with childhood, a need to reflect on the past during a current crisis, or the hope for closure resulting from unfinished business. Add in the ability to shift between worlds at will, and the puzzle possibilities could open up in unique ways. We North America - Volume 1 your feedback.
